Terms of Use

Updated 9/6/16

All the electronic content provided by WKU Libraries (ebooks, streaming media, ejournals, and databases) are governed by license agreements that dictate appropriate use of the resources. If users violate these agreements, our access to the resource may be terminated without notice.

Generally, all resources licensed by WKU Libraries are available to all WKU faculty, staff, and students, as well as walk-in patrons, for non-commercial use. All resources are protected under U.S Copyright Law.

Generally permitted uses include:

- Making a limited number of printouts or copies.
- Use for personal research or educational needs.
- Posting links to content within Blackboard or other restricted course websites.
- Sharing content with others at WKU (other authorized users).

Generally prohibited uses include:

- Sharing resources outside the WKU community.
- Systematic downloading.
- Printing or downloading substantial amounts of material (an entire book or journal).
- Posting content on publically accessible websites or listservs.
- Removing copyright notices from content.
- Using content for commercial purposes.
- Sharing your NetID to provide access to content.

As noted in WKU's Information Technology Acceptable Use Policy, users are responsible for the security of their own account credentials. Sharing of account credentials to allow others access to Library resources is prohibited.

Additional restrictions may apply. Most databases and journal platforms include a link to their terms of use at the bottom of the page. If you have any questions about appropriate use, please contact Laura DeLancey (laura.delancey@wku.edu).
