Lyndsey Thomason was named Richardsonville Elementary School principal Tuesday afternoon. She will assume her new responsibility July 1.

“I’m excited about deepening the relationships that I’ve established. I tell myself all the time ‘the deeper the roots, the higher the reach,’ and so I’m excited about the opportunity to see how high we can go,” Thomason said.

Thomason is a Bowling Green native. She attended elementary, middle and high school in the Warren County public school system before attending Western Kentucky University.

In 2009 Thomason graduated from WKU with a Bachelor of Arts in teacher education. She then began her teaching career at Briarwood Elementary School before returning to WKU to receive a Master of Arts in Physical Education in 2010. She received Rank 1 in Principal Leadership in 2016 and her Doctorate of Education in Educational Leadership in 2019 from University of Cumberlands.

“I always had aspirations of being an administrator, and I'm thankful for the opportunity to (Rob Clayton, WCPS superintendent) and the site council for giving me this opportunity to be a lead principal, within Warren County public schools,” Thomason said.

Thomason has spent the past four years at Richlandville Elementary School working as the student services coordinator and the dean of students. Before that, she worked as a physical education teacher for nine years at Briarwood.

“I am a lifelong learner. I am excited for this opportunity,” Thomason said.
